Fed takes further steps to bolster sliding dollar

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (Agencies) — In another action to help support the dollar, the Federal Reserve Board took steps Monday to encourage borrowing of foreign-held dollars by American banks.

About $500 billion in U.S. dollars are held overseas. They are called "Eurodollars" because they are outside the control of U.S. banking authorities.

The amount of foreign-held dollars has grown sharply in recent years, in part because of the U.S. trade deficit that sends dollars abroad, and they have frequently been used by speculators to drive down the overall value of the dollar.

To encourage use of the so-called Eurodollars by American banks, the Federal Reserve Board Monday removed the requirement that U.S. banks must maintain reserves equal to 4 per cent of what they borrow abroad.

The effect of the reserve reduction is intended to encourage member banks to substitute Eurodollar borrowings for domestic borrowings as a source of funds," the board said in a statement.

The board said it was "a further move to improve the international position of the dollar."

If the action has the intended effect, it would mean some of the foreign-held dollars would be returned to this country for use in domestic lending.

This would reduce the amount of dollars held abroad, contributing to overall strength of the American currency.

The action is the third taken in recent weeks by U.S. financial authorities to help strengthen the dollar on world money markets. The Fed previously increased its interest rate on loans to banks to make holding dollars more attractive, and the Treasury Department has increased the amount of gold it will sell at its monthly auctions.

Officials have said other actions are in the works to prevent any sharp declines in the value of the dollar on world money markets. None of the moves taken so far has been dramatic, but when added together, officials hope they will make the dollar more attractive.

One complaint of foreigners has been that the amount of dollars flowing out of the United States has been increasing steadily, adding to the supply at a time when demand is too weak to absorb them all.

The Fed's change in the reserve requirements means it will no longer be necessary for U.S. banks to maintain any reserves on foreign borrowings, although the reserve requirements on domestic deposits remain in force.

The change applies to the more than 5,000 banks that are members of the Federal Reserve system and that were the only banks subject to the reserve requirements.

The dollar firmed a bit against most European currencies Monday after the Federal Reserve announcement. But

Summit on Sept. 5

Sadat decides on strategy tomorrow with top advisors

CAIRO, Aug. 28 (Agencies) — President Anwar Sadat will preside over a meeting of the Egyptian National Security Council Wednesday presumably to map out Egypt's strategy at next month's Camp David summit talks with Israel and the United States.

Sadat used to consult with the council, which comprises his top political and military aides as well as parliament speaker and the head of the Egyptian intelligence, before taking issues of major importance.

A terse statement distributed by the Middle East News Agency Monday said the meeting would take place at the Suez Canal city of Ismailia where Sadat is currently vacationing.

The report on the council's meeting came only few hours after a government spokesman was quoted by the semi-official newspaper "Al-Ahram" as saying that Egypt views the Sept. 5 talks as "decisive" in current Mideast peace efforts and a "serious step that equals the importance of Sadat's peace trip to Jerusalem last November."

The White House has insisted that the Middle East summit will start at President Carter's mountain retreat at Camp David, Maryland, on Sept. 5, as originally scheduled.

The Egyptian spokesman said Sadat will concentrate in his talks with Israeli Premier Menachem Begin and U.S. President Jimmy Carter on the Palestinian ian problem which Egypt considers as the core of the Middle East conflict.

The spokesman was apparently reacting to a statement Begin made Sunday in which he said Israel is unwilling to change its policy toward a Middle East peace settlement.

Egypt insists on an Israeli commitment to withdraw from Arab territories it occupied in the 1967 war while Israel only agrees to discuss sovereignty of the West Bank of River Jordan and the Gaza Strip after five years of limited Palestinian self-rule.

Informed sources said here he was expected to brief Kuwaiti leaders on his talks in North and South Yemen and on a visit last week to Saudi Arabia.

KUWAIT, Aug. 28 (Agencies) — Palestinian commando leader Yasser Arafat conferred here Monday with Kuwait's Ruler, Sheikh Jaber Al-Ahmad Al-Sabah.

Government sources said Arafat outlined to Sheikh Jaber how the Palestinian Liberation Organization viewed the latest round of fighting between rightwing militiamen and Syrian peacekeeping forces in Lebanon as well as the forthcoming Camp David summit meeting between U.S. President Jimmy Carter, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Arafat also met with Kuwaiti Foreign Minister Sheikh Sabah Al-Ahmad.

Arafat, who arrived here earlier Monday from Aden, also visited Sanaa and was believed to be trying to reconcile the two Yemeni states, an attempt which has the blessing of Kuwait.

Meanwhile, Egyptian Foreign Minister Muhammad Ibrahim Kamel held a lengthy meeting with his top aides for a final year.

Syrians attack northern area as violence returns to Beirut

BEIRUT, Aug. 28 (Agencies) — Syrian peacekeeping forces struck at the northeastern Lebanese Cedars province Monday, broadening their military operations against rightwing militiamen.

Syria accused the two parties of collaborating with Israel.

Butros also was to discuss the extension of the peacekeepers' mandate here, which expires in October.

Arab diplomatic sources here quoted Khaddam as saying that Syria may beef up its peacekeeping forces in Lebanon.

The Syrians already form more than 80 per cent of a 30,000-strong Arab League peace army here. The army came to Lebanon in the summer of 1976, when it halted a 19-month civil war between rightists and an alliance of leftists and Palestinian commandos.

The Lebanese had no alternative but to stand fast in order to defend their independence, Gemayel said.

Iran cinema arsonist detained in Baghdad; to be extradited

BAGHDAD, Aug. 28 (Agencies) — Iraqi authorities have arrested an Iranian who said he had a hand in starting a cinema fire in which at least 377 people were killed in Iran's western city of Ahwaz, the Iraq News Agency reported Monday.

The official news agency quoted a source in the interior ministry saying the Baghdad authorities had decided to hand the man over to Iran. It said the Iranian government had been informed of the decision.

The agency named the man as Hashem Abdul Rida Asfour and said he had closed down cinemas and other gambling places in a further move to appease Muslim religious feeling.

The measure, reported by newspapers as part of an order to police chiefs by incoming Prime Minister Jaafar Sharif-Emami, followed other minor concessions to influential conservative Muslim elders Sunday after his appointment by the Shah.

Meanwhile, one minor anti-Shah demonstration was reported in Tehran Monday after sporadic weekend rioting outside the capital with reports of five deaths.

The man did not ask for political asylum, the source said.

Meanwhile Iran's day-old government, trying to calm the country after months of anti-Shah rioting, said Mooday that it would close down cinemas and other gambling places in a further move to appease Muslim religious feeling.

The measure, reported by newspapers as part of an order to police chiefs by incoming Prime Minister Jaafar Sharif-Emami, followed other minor concessions to influential conservative Muslim elders Sunday after his appointment by the Shah.

Some leaders have been demanding the creation of a Muslim elders' council, which is provided for in the 1906 constitution and would have veto powers on legislation. Others have demanded an Islamic government.

After his new government's appointment Sunday, Sharif-Emami ordered the immediate replacement of the two-year-old imperial calendar introduced by the Shah by the traditional Muslim solar calendar.

In another apparent concession to Islamic feeling, his cabinet list did not include a minister for women's affairs — a post in the cabinet of resigned Premier Jamsheed Amouzgar as part of Iran's modernization program.

Prime Minister Sharif-Emami, a 68-year-old former senator, Sunday promised a war on bureaucracy and corruption and said he would foster respect for religious principles and Islamic laws.

Development of agriculture and rural areas would be a priority, he said.

But his first measures, closing the casinos and reconstituting the Islamic calendar, appeared clearly designed to take the heat out of the anti-regime demonstrations which have hit most major towns.

Over 35 people have died in rioting this year.

Iran prepares to receive Hua

TEHRAN, Aug. 28 (R) — Flags of welcome flew in the Iranian capital Monday for Chinese leader Hua Kuo-feng, who arrives Tuesday for his first visit to a Middle East country.

The Chinese premier and Communist Party chairman has two sessions of talks scheduled with the Shah, whose oil-exporting nation is strategically poised between Europe and Asia.

The Middle East, developments in Africa and East-West detente, are expected to dominate the discussions, the first between the Shah and a top Chinese leader since the two countries established diplomatic links in 1971.

They are also expected to discuss the policies and power play of their mutual neighbor, the Soviet Union, which Sunday accused Hua of seeking to sow discord among Communist countries during his visits to Romania and Yugoslavia.

Hua will fly in from Belgrade Tuesday afternoon to a red-carpet airport welcome after which a horse-drawn carriage will take him and the Shah to view a major monument nearby.

From there the Chinese leader will fly by helicopter to his residence, the ornate Golestan Palace in central Tehran near the city's teeming bazaar.

Security for his visit is expected to be very strict especially near the Golestan Palace, situated only a few hundred meters from areas where turbulence flared in recent days.

Hua's talks with the Shah are scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday at the monarch's summer palace at Saadabad, beneath the stark mountains that dominate the capital. He flies back to Peking Friday.

Hua will be the first foreign leader to meet Iran's new Prime Minister, Jaafar Sharif-Emami, and Foreign Minister Amir Khosrov Afshar when they call on him Wednesday.

Though his talks here are expected to center on world issues, possible cooperation in oil, of which both countries are big producers, could be one specific area of bilateral cooperation for review.

China's petroleum industry minister, Sung Chen-ning, made an extensive tour of Iran's oil installations last month and said China was interested in the prospects of Iranian participation in China's oil exploration program.

China bought 300,000 tons of Iranian crude oil last year.

Brzezinski may hold talks with North Yemen premier

By Bob Lebling

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 — Visiting North Yemen Prime Minister Abdul Aziz Abdul Ghani may hold a surprise meeting Tuesday with President Carter's National Security advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski, State Department sources said Monday.

Abdul Ghani, who is on a private visit to the United States, has been trying to arrange the meeting for several days, but Brzezinski has been vacationing in North Carolina and has been out of touch with Washington, the sources said.

The presidential advisor is believed to be back in the nation's capital now, and a decision on whether the meeting would take place was expected Monday.

There was no immediate word on what the two men would discuss, but observers here believed the talks would focus on increased U.S. military assistance for North Yemen and Red Sea security matters.

Abdul Ghani was reportedly in New York, awaiting word from Brzezinski. Sources said the prime minister was attending ing a luncheon Monday hosted by the Morgan Guaranty Trust Bank.

Abdul Ghani arrived in the United States over a week ago to receive an honorary degree from the University of Colorado.

If Brzezinski agrees to a meeting, the North Yemen premier will fly down to Washington, sources said.

Abdul Ghani is also scheduled to meet Tuesday afternoon with deputy secretary of state, Warren Christopher, but there was no confirmation that that meeting would take place.

Asnag arrives in Qatar with message from Saleh

DOHA, Aug. 28 (R) — North Yemen Foreign Minister Abdullah al-Asnag arrived here Monday from Abu Dhabi on the second leg of an Arab tour.

He told the official Qatari News Agency he was carrying a message from President Ali Abdullah Saleh to the ruler of Qatar, Sheikh Khalifa bin Hamad al-Thani, on current Arab developments.

Earlier in Abu Dhabi Asnag was quoted Monday as saying his country was ready to forget its quarrel with neighbor

There were reports here Monday that Abdul Ghani would bypass Washington if Brzezinski was not available for a meeting.

Egyptian experts to repair Jerusalem Al Aqsa Mosque

JERUSALEM, Aug. 28 (AP)

— In what appeared to be a goodwill gesture before the Camp David summit meeting of Mideast leaders, Egypt has told Israel it is prepared to send architects to Jerusalem to plan the restoration of a Muslim shrine.

A spokesman for the city Mayor Teddy Kollek said Monday Egypt's vice president for presidential affairs, Hassan Tohami, wrote Kollek that he would "notify you in the coming weeks about the arrival of our first group of architects" to reconstruct the al Aqsa mosque.

The silver-domed mosque was set alight in 1969 by Australian Jew who claimed in court he had been "ordered by God."

Sadat offered to send funds and knowhow to restore the intricate mosaics of the interior. Tohami's letter said plans for rebuilding the pulpit were "nearing completion." The mosque is administered by a Muslim land trust, the waqf.

The architects would be the first official Egyptian delegation to Israel since President Anwar Sadat summoned home his foreign minister from negotiations in Israel last January.

In a letter dated Friday and brought by an unidentified Western courier, Tohami said the delegation would represent "a breakthrough of old barriers of the darkness of the past" and would pave the way toward peaceful coexistence.

Kollek replied that the architects would receive a "warm welcome" and "all possible assistance," and reaffirmed Israel's "commitment to free access" to holy places of all religions.

The exchange of letters, written in English, appeared to have top-level approval on both sides. Kollek's spokeswoman said Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan was advised of the letters before the reply was sent Sunday. Tohami, a close adviser to Sadat, also was believed to have received a presidential nod.

The idea for Egyptians to rebuild the mosque first arose during Sadat's trip to Jerusalem last November which launched direct peace talks.

The proposal lay dormant as negotiations for a Mideast settlement bogged down. Its revival seemed carefully timed to the Camp David summit Sept. 6 between Sadat, Prime Minister Menachem Begin and President Carter. Tohami also was expected to be in the Egyptian delegation.

Sadat's first official act on his Jerusalem trip was to pray at the mosque, which holds a special place in Islam as the farthest point traveled by the Prophet Muhammad on his ascent to heaven. Muslims consider it the third most holy place after Mecca and Medina.

In a letter dated Friday and brought by an unidentified Western courier, Tohami said the delegation would represent "a breakthrough of old barriers of the darkness of the past" and

Armenians responsible for bombings in Turkey

BEIRUT, Aug. 28 (R) — Armenian urban guerrillas Monday claimed responsibility for a series of bombings in Turkey last week, aimed at furthering Armenian rights.

On June 2 an Armenian extremist group calling itself the "Armenian Genocide Justice Commando" claimed responsibility for shooting to death the wife, brother-in-law and chauffeur of the Turkish ambassador in Madrid that day.

That day's announcement by a group calling itself the "Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia" (ASALA) said last week's bombings were aimed at forcing Turkish authorities to recognize the national rights of the Armenian people.

An ASALA statement delivered to the Reuters office in Beirut, which has a large Armenian community, reported that on Wednesday and Friday its men staged explosions at military installations and elsewhere in Ankara and Istanbul. One soldier was hurt, it added.

The ASALA statement also said its commandos had bombed the Gezira bridge in Istanbul on Friday. Istanbul police at the time reported a small, time-bomb had exploded on the bridge without casualties and said there was no immediate indication of who was responsible.

ASALA's statement, which did not reveal its headquarters, termed the bombings a first warning that the group could strike at the Turkish authorities at any time, adding they must "recognize the national rights of the Armenian people and their right to live on their land."

Turkey will reduce forces if arms embargo continues

ANKARA, Aug. 28 (R) — Turkey's armed forces would be reduced in number if the American arms embargo imposed four years ago continued, Turkey's Chief of Staff Gen. Kepan Evren said.

"If this situation continues, a reduction in the number of Turkish armed forces will be inevitable," he said.

Gen. Evren said the American arms embargo had been continued "stubbornly and unreasonably" and had shown that "no one should be trusted too far."

According to the London-based International Institute for Strategic Studies, Turkey's total armed forces at present number 465,000.

Greek police seize arms said belonging to Arabs

ATHENS, Aug. 28 (R) — Greek security forces have seized explosives and weapons in an Athens suburb believed to belong to Arab extremists, a source close to the police said Monday.

Police searching a flat in Phaleron summer resort near Athens found 100 kgs (more than 200 lbs) of dynamite and five automatic pistols, according to the source.

The flat was rented by a group of Arabs wanted by the police, the source said.

Police are investigating whether the arms cache is linked with the murder earlier this month of an Arab carrying a passport bearing the name Suleiman Ahmad al-Motak.

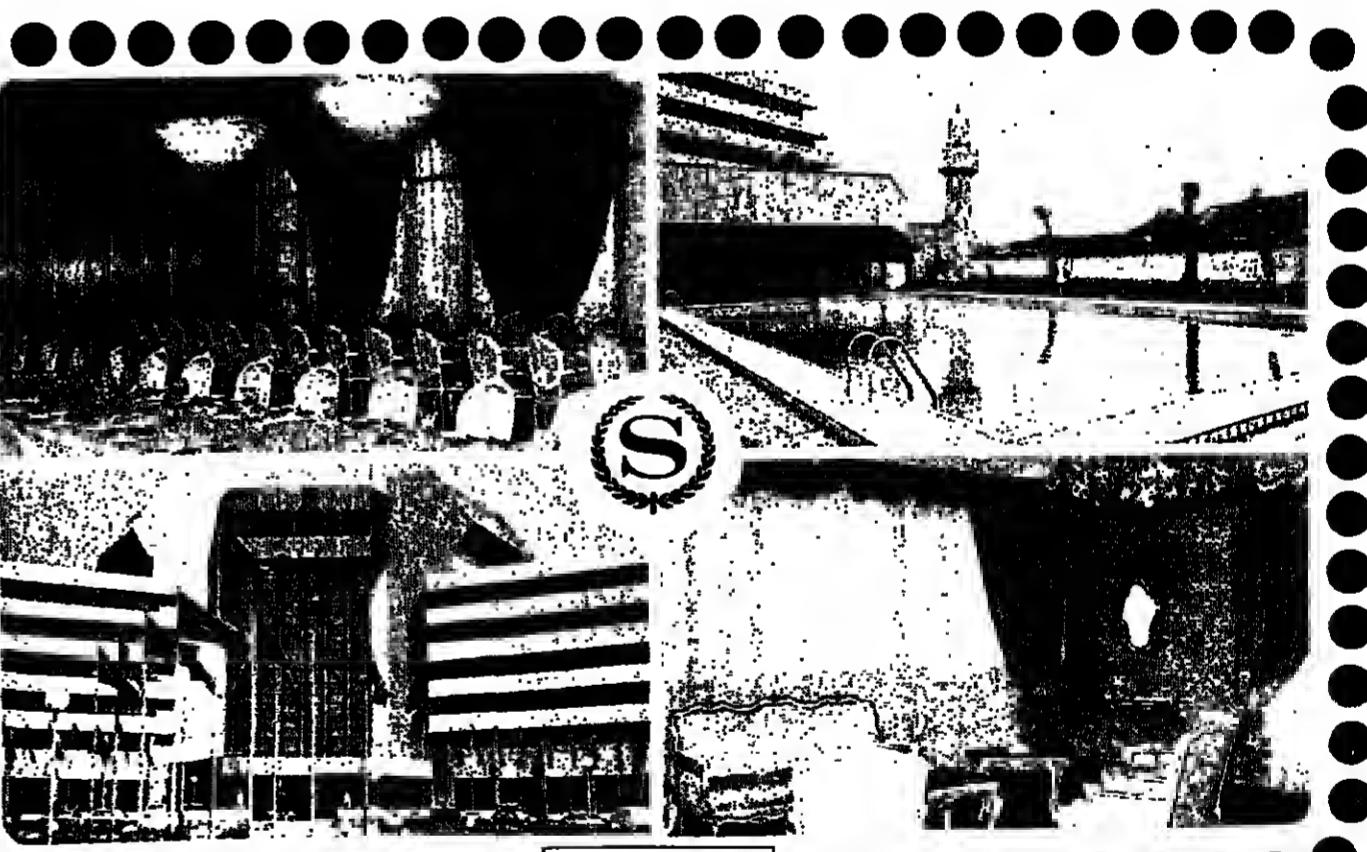

Two men fled after killing

A radical Palestinian group said in Beirut shortly after Molak's killing that his real name was Bashir Ibrahim Jibril, 29, and that he was an agent of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP).

Police have not established why Motak was murdered and whether the dynamite found in his room was meant to be used in Greece or elsewhere.

Police are holding Motak's roommate, a 21-year-old Lebanese named as Constantine Nabil Kamata on charges of illegal possession of dynamite.

Cabinet to be sworn in today

Portuguese premier confirmed

LISBON, Aug. 28 (R) — President Antonio Ramalho Eanes Monday formally appointed Alfredo Nobre Da Costa, the 55-year-old independent as Portugal's fifth prime minister since the 1974 revolution.

The appointment was announced in the official gazette. Nobre da Costa and his 15-man non-party cabinet will be sworn in by Eanes at a ceremony Tuesday.

Nobre da Costa, former industry minister, takes over from Socialist Prime Minister Mario Soares, who was dismissed by Eanes a month ago after the collapse of his six-month-old cabinet partnership with the Conservatives in a dispute over land reform and health policy.

The new premier has 10 days in which to present his government programme to a five-day debate in parliament, and any party can move to reject it. An adverse vote of more than half the 263 members of the assembly is needed to defeat the government.

Portugal's five major political parties, whose inability to agree among themselves has prolonged the current crisis, have all expressed reservations about Nobre da Costa's team — but none has yet declared itself to be ready to initiate a motion in parliament.

Nobre da Costa will now head Portugal's ninth government — six provisional, three constitutional — since the 1974 coup which ended nearly half a century of right-wing dictatorship.

The prime ministers before him were center-right law professor and businessman Adeo Palma Carlos, left-wing Gen. Vasco Goncalves, centrist Adm. Jose Pinheiro de Azevedo and Socialist leader Soares, whose party has ruled Portugal since the 1976 general elections.

Czech monument blown up

VIENNA, Aug. 28 (AP) — A monument to Klement Gottwald, the first Communist president of Czechoslovakia, was blown up late last Wednesday at the Czech mining town of Pribram, two days after the tenth anniversary of the Soviet-led invasion, reports from Prague said Monday.

A Vienna newspaper said that according to sources in Prague the blast demolishing the downtown Gottwald Monument caused a gaping crater and shattered windows and facades for several hundred meters.

While police were investigating the incident, the report said, the site of the powerful explosion was completely sealed off.

Gottwald, who played a key role in the Communist power takeover, was president from 1948 to his death in 1953.

The report said that several people of Pribram have relatively easy access to large quantities of explosives stored there for use at the nearby uranium ore mine.

The blast that reportedly occurred toward midnight could be heard in large parts of the town and woke up many people.

In the absence of any official word, news of the explosion first reached Prague by telephone, but dissidents withheld the report until an eyewitness came to Prague who gave details.

Dead Johannesburg blacks win right to desegregated cremation

JOHANNESBURG, Aug. 28 (AP) — White may not live with other races, nor may they be buried with them, but in Johannesburg all races may now be cremated in the same, crematorium.

The administrator of Transvaal Province, Sybrand van Niekerk, has given permission for all races to be cremated at the municipal crematorium — the only one in the city, the "Johannesburg Star" reported Monday.

Danie van Zyl, chairman of the city council's Parks and Recreation Department, which controls the crematorium, said the decision to permit all races to use it was in response to public requests.

Before this request, there had been no demand by other races than whites for cremations.

So far two blacks and two colored people — of mixed race — have been cremated there.

Cremation has become more popular among whites recently.

Cremation is more expensive than burial but relatives can save the upkeep of the grave.

Political observers said that Jagiwan Ram has been drawn into the spotlight of controversy by the alleged incident involving his son, having previously managed to keep out of the growing squabbles within the Janata Party leadership.

As well as his part in the 1974 film "Jaws" which was a world-wide success, he appeared in its follow-up "The Deep."

Shaw was also a prolific author. His novels included "The Hiding Place," "The Sun Doctor," "The Flag" and "The Man in the Glass Booth."

Shaw made his first appearance on the stage at the Shakespeare Memorial Theater, Stratford-upon-Avon, in the 1949 production of "Macbeth." He remained principally a Shakespearean actor for several years.

Shaw was born in Westborough, north-west England, in 1927, the son of a doctor.

NAIROBI, Aug. 28 (AP) — Jomo Kenyatta, the first president of independent Kenya, will be buried Thursday in a 34-foot square mausoleum with flaming urns at each corner, it was announced here Monday.

The glass-walled mausoleum, located in the grounds of Kenya's parliament building in Nairobi, will be floodlit at night and inside will be a tomb in grey Italian marble.

More than 100 workmen have been laboring round the clock since Kenyatta's death last Tuesday to complete the mausoleum. It is still not clear if Kenyatta's body is to be permanently preserved for display, but official announcements indicate this is planned.

Acting President Daniel Arap Moi, who is tipped to succeed Kenyatta, will read the main eulogy during ceremonies at the tomb.

Kenyatta's body, at present lying in state at his official residence in Nairobi, will be drawn through the streets of Nairobi on a gun carriage on the way to his final resting place.

Marcos denounces moral imperialism of U.S. on rights

MANILA, Aug. 28 (AP) — President Ferdinand Marcos hit at the United States Monday for using the human rights issue as a means for a "new moral imperialism," saying it has no right to act as ombudsman for the world.

"We in the Philippines repudiate the concept that as the people of a developing country, the Filipinos should run to a developed country for the protection of their human rights," he said.

Although he avoided mentioning the United States by name in a speech opening the world conference of the international law association, it was obvious the reference was to Washington when he said:

"No developed country can arrogate unto itself the function of acting as ombudsman or protector of the Philippines or guardian of the rights of its citizenry. This function the Filipinos are best equipped to do, and from this function we have no intention of stepping backward in favor of those who would presume to undertake what is best left to ourselves."

Despite persistent criticism of the human rights situation in the Philippines by anti-Marcos Filipinos here and in the United States, the U.S. Congress has continuously approved economic and military aid to this country to maintain access to U.S. bases here. But the Carter administration has warned countries they will stop receiving U.S. aid if they continue violating human rights.

The administration and Congress have often criticized Marcos' record on human rights, and one civil rights leader accused of subversion was freed from military detention after the U.S. government intervened.

Marcos said that as head of state of a developing country, "I place great emphasis on a human rights policy that embraces political and civil rights on the one hand, and economic and cultural rights on the other. Human rights should not be in-

Kuwaiti oil minister to visit 2 OPEC states

KUWAIT, Aug. 28 (R)—Kuwaiti Oil Minister Sheikh Ali Khalifa al-Sabah, OPEC's current president, returned here Monday from a one-day visit to Iraq and prepared to travel to two other member-states of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

Sheikh Ali, who has made similar visits to Iran and Saudi Arabia, was expected to fly to the United Arab Emirates and Qatar later Monday or Tuesday.

A government spokesman Sunday said Sheikh Ali was consulting OPEC members.

Ghana takes over Lebanese-owned assembly plant

ACCRA, Aug. 28 (R)—The Ghanaian government has taken over Lebanese vehicle assembly plant because of trade malpractices and tax evasion, the Ghana News Agency reported.

The agency said that earlier this month, two Lebanese brothers who ran the company were deprived of their Ghanaian citizenship and deported at 48 hours notice for economic sabotage and subversion.

Two MPs urge action over alleged British oil sales to Rhodesia LONDON, Aug. 28 (AP)—Two British Members of Parliament Monday urged action over renewed allegations that the nationalized oil company British Petroleum and the Royal Dutch-Shell group have illegally sent oil to Rhodesia.

One of them, Labor Member of Parliament William Molloy, said he will seek the reconvening of the House of Commons, now adjourned for its summer recess, to study the allegations.

The "Sunday Times" reported that BP had told an inquiry investigating violations of the United Kingdom blockade on trade with Rhodesia that it had knowingly supplied it with petroleum products for almost 12 years, up until 1977.

Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith unilaterally declared independence from Britain in 1965 after refusing to move toward a transfer of power to its black majority. But Britain considered the break illegal and still regards Rhodesia a colony.

The "Times" printed what it said were BP submissions to Thomas Bingham, a lawyer appointed by the British government in April 1977 to investigate the alleged oil company trade violations.

The Bingham report has not yet been officially published. Foreign Secretary David Owen is studying it and is expected to make a statement soon regarding its contents.

CAB authorizes Pan Am to buy 25% of National

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Board Monday authorized Pan American World Airways to purchase up to 25 per cent of the stock in National Airlines, the same authority it gave Texas International Airlines earlier.

The board said it would decide in 30 days whether the two carriers can keep more than 10 per cent of the shares in their battle to take control of National.

In its order, the CAB also assigned the Texas International-National acquisition case

North Central-Southern Airways merger case to separate administrative law judges. It is expected to assign a judge to the Pan Am-National case later this week.

The board directed the judges to make decisions by

Jan. 2. It earlier set March 1

as the target date for its final ruling.

Interested parties have 30 days to comment on Monday's order. That will provide the basis for a board ruling on whether Texas International and Pan Am can keep the extra stock.

National last week asked the board to reconsider its decision to let Texas International, or any other company, buy more than 10 per cent of its shares, a limit it says is supported by federal laws.

had no comment on the renewed controversy.

But British Petroleum issued a statement saying the Bingham inquiry has been presented to Owen. "The question of whether the report is published is one for her majesty's government. The proceedings of this official inquiry have been conducted in private," BP said.

"It would be quite wrong for the company to comment on its work or on the matters within its terms of reference, notwithstanding the allegations made in the press or on television," the British oil company added.

It said company documents were made available to Bingham and oral evidence also was given.

Until recently, both Shell and BP consistently have denied any Rhodesian involvement.

Ever since Smith's declaration of independence, it has been a criminal offense for any British person or company to trade with Rhodesia, directly or indirectly.

The maximum penalty is two years' imprisonment and/or unlimited fine.

Molloy said he will ask House of Commons leader Michael Foot to reconvene the lawmakers to study the Bingham report.

Meanwhile, Labor lawmaker John Ryman Monday urged Owen to turn the Bingham report over to Attorney General Sam Silkin for possible prosecution.

Carter will curtail holiday to push energy legislation

JACKSON HOLE, Wyoming, Aug. 28 (R)—President Carter is sacrificing two days of his holiday, hoping to early return to Washington to help convince Congress that international stakes ride on Friday to be with his key advisers as they try to halt deteriorating support in Congress.

"We view the fight over the natural gas compromise to be as difficult as any we have ever faced in Congress," spokesman Powell told reporters traveling with the president.

The dollar has sagged on world currency markets with word that the gas pricing compromise was coming apart, he said.

However, the delegation, which has been meeting with private businessmen and government officials for the past five days, has

MEDIOCRE VS MUNDANE

The Arabs who believe that President Carter has nothing to worry about except the Middle East problem are grossly misinformed. The U.S. president has at least three or four problems that top the Middle East in his list of priorities. Israel is well aware of the president's problems and, come Camp David, may only need to maneuver and stall a little bit to allow the other problems to catch up with Mr. Carter and divert his attention from the Middle East for a while.

The president has already cut short a holiday to return to Washington and prepare for another round in his ongoing duel with Congress. The American press has explained that the president needs to play with his secretary of the treasury and chairman of the Federal Reserve a defense of the weakened dollar in world markets. It also mentioned sorting out snags facing the new round of SALT talks.

The two problems of the dollar are well known: It is losing ground against the major European currencies. The SALT talks are far more complicated. Faced with a stubborn Congress, President Carter has attempted to side-step the legislature by going for "executive agreements" with the Soviets instead of a treaty as demanded by Congress. This way he would avoid having to win advance Congressional approval of his plans. But Senate majority leader Robert Byrd has insisted that Congress will accept nothing less than a treaty and that the president will have to acquire two thirds support for his plans or face defeat.

The president will also face defeat if he presents his natural gas bill. The bill first met stern opposition but presidential aides then managed to win the support of a few key senators and thought that approval was secured. But now there is a group of 18 senators campaigning against the bill which includes Liberals and Conservatives and in fact representatives of every Congressional hue. Only President Carter is able to get lined against him such a politically mixed bag.

The problems of the energy program are compounded by the fact that the energy-rich southern states are still not convinced of the need to save oil. Bumper stickers in Texas say: "Drive Fast, Let a Yankee Freeze."

The president is a southerner himself but even his defense allocations are freezing. Normally, there are no major problems over defense spending. This time, however, Congress approved a nuclear-powered aircraft carrier costing $2.1 billion that the administration does not want. So the president vetoed the decision and the problem still has to be worked out.

At the moment, the president's popularity in opinion polls has dropped even below Nixon's at the height of the Watergate scandal. But Congress is even less popular with only 12 per cent of Americans giving it a passing mark. Some 60 Congressmen have announced their intention not to contest office this autumn and the general reason is their disillusionment with Congressional achievements. The fight, in other words, is between the mediocre and the mundane with the Arabs and their Middle East problem suffering the results of the historical contest between the American executive and legislature.

In an editorial, "Al-Medina" referred to the election of a new Pope and to the relations between Christians and Muslims and said "there should be no justification for any animosity between the followers of the two faiths, because the objective of the message of Jesus Christ was the same as that of Prophet Muhammad. Both had called for the worship of the one God." It said:

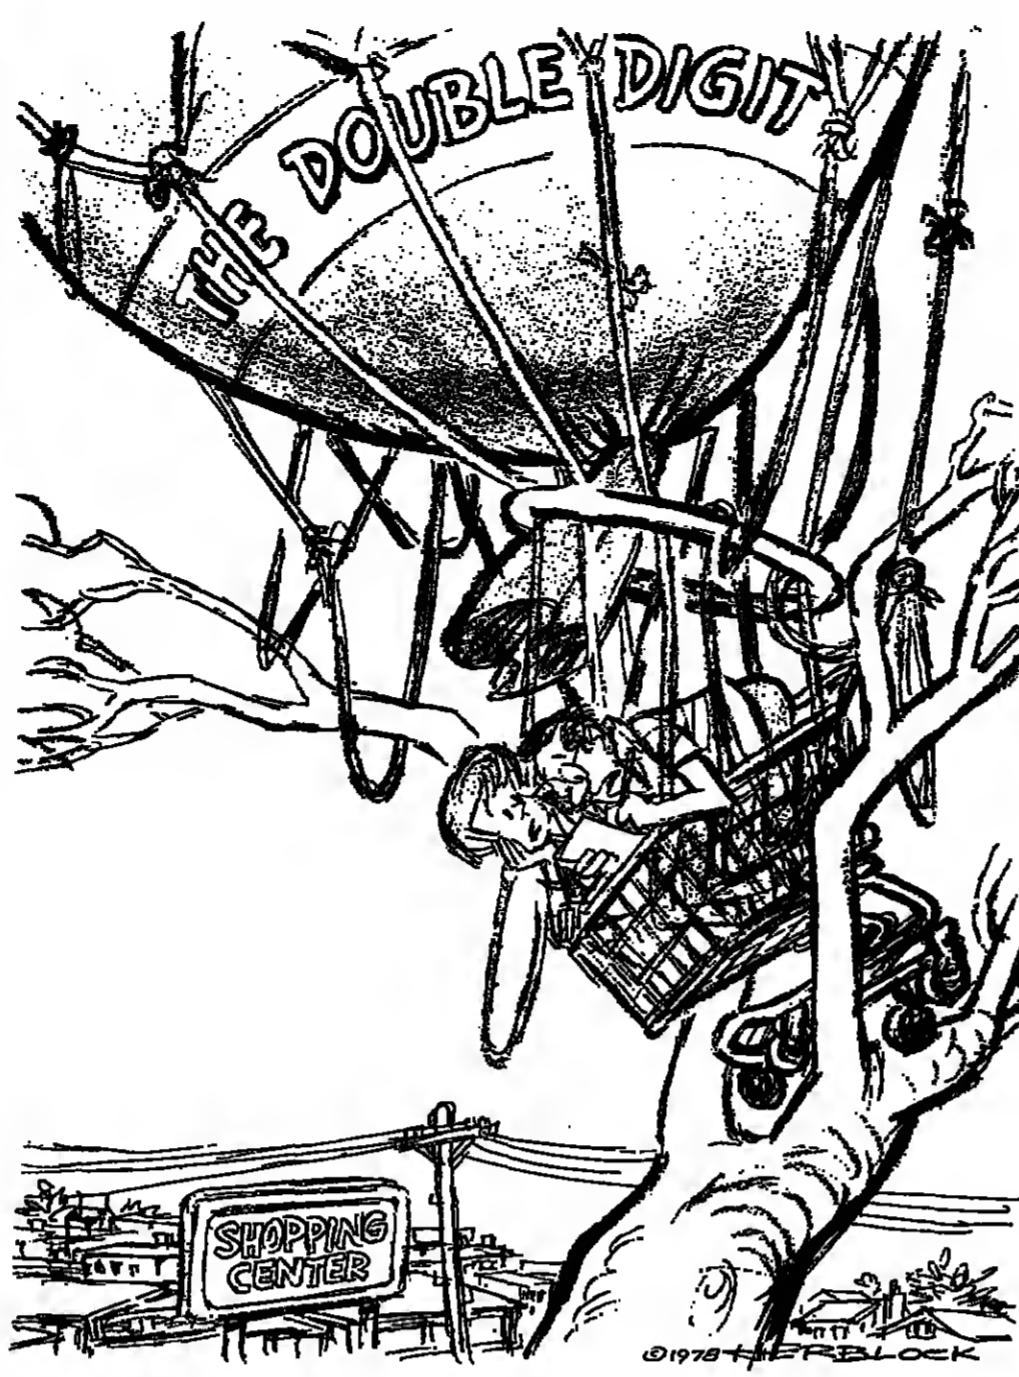

"Consequently, it is not justifiable for anyone to rejoice in the sufferings of the people of Palestine who have been reduced to their present state as a result of cooperation between the forces of Western (Christian) colonialism and Zionism to wrest Palestine from its people and establish a Jewish state. The matter is worthy of attention."

An explosive bargain

MUNICH—

The incident in the German Consulate in Chicago illustrates vividly the extraordinary delicacy of the decision facing Helmut Schmidt: whether to allow the extradition of Stepan Bilandzic. On the one hand, there is nothing the Federal Republic wants more than Yugoslavian cooperation over the fight against German terrorism. On the other hand, there is nothing it wants less than bitter Croatian exiles threatening the lives of Germans all over the world, let alone in the Federal Republic.

Bilandzic was until May the chairman of the Croatian National Resistance, the organization founded by General Max Luhuvic in Spain after the Second World War. Lubuvic had been in charge of concentration camps during the Nazi period of the Croatian national state. He was Croatia's answer to Himmler. He was murdered in 1963.

In 1962, Bilandzic was among 26 Croatians who blew up a Yugoslav trade mission in Mihem. He served three years of a prison sentence for his part in the incident. This is not therefore included in the present charges against him.

Although Bilandzic, an unemployed teacher, is a revered leader of Croatians in exile, his wife and his supporters have insisted that he is not a terrorist and that there is no equivalence between the Croatian nationalist movement and the German terrorist gangs. They could therefore only be embarrassed by the attempt to secure the release of their leader through hostages and threats of murder.

The slogan of the demonstrators in Cologne and Frankfurt has been that Croatians in government.

For its part, the German government has always insisted that there is no question of a deal. And, despite the obvious links between the two moves, they are in a way right. German courts have ruled out extradition in all but one of the cases. The final decision, however, assuming all legal appeals on behalf of Bilandzic fail, will rest with the government.

Bilandzic was until May the chairman of the Croatian National Resistance, the organization founded by General Max Luhuvic in Spain after the Second World War. Lubuvic had been in charge of concentration camps during the Nazi period of the Croatian national state. He was Croatia's answer to Himmler. He was murdered in 1963.

The question Helmut Schmidt faces is—is it either right or wise to hand Bilandzic over to Yugoslav justice? The recent demonstrations in the Federal Republic have involved hundreds of Croatians. If experience shows anything, it is that hundreds of angry and embittered Croatians can be exceedingly dangerous. (G) world away from the Zionist clashes." The paper expressed the belief that the Vatican has the best understanding — outside the Islamic world — of the situation in Palestine.

"Hence continued support for the usurped rights will greatly affect the trend toward an equitable solution to the Middle East problem," the paper added.

Japan hoarding oil

By Mark Murray

TOKYO—

Of all the countries affected by the 1973 Arab "oil shock," Japan was one of the most shocked. It sent officials scampering off to Arab oil capitals to buy any available oil at ludicrously expensive prices. At home, the government summarily dumped Israel and embraced a pro-Arab stand on Middle East politics.

Now, saner counsels have prevailed and the Japanese have decided they have got to hoard oil as if their life depends on it, which it does. Japan's huge trade surpluses are ultimately fueled almost exclusively by foreign oil, most of it from the Middle East.

Economic and defense planners have been looking at the threat posed by the Soviet Pacific fleet, now reaching out powerful feelers into the Indian Ocean as far as the Gulf and the Red Sea. Japanese tankers are reporting regular sightings of Russian naval ships along their routes.

Remembering how Japan's oil supplies were choked off in the last world war, the government has launched a campaign to stockpile oil. Like housewives using every pail and tin can in a drought, the Japanese do not mind what they use so long as they have the oil on (or near) Japanese soil.

The nation's refining industry is legally obliged to build up a 90 million kiloliter stockpile, an estimated 90-day supply at present rate of use, by next year. The trade ministry is not satisfied and is pushing this up to another 10 days supply by 1982 and to a total of 120 days by the mid-1980s.

But the campaign poses the problem of where to put all this oil. The 114 million Japanese already utilize almost every square foot of their mountainous island chain and land prices are high.

Given the present shipbuilding glut, the government plans to use unwanted supertankers of up to half a million tons deadweight to store about five million kiloliters offshore. The two most likely sites are the atomic-bombed city of Nagasaki and another famous wartime name, the island of Iwo Jima. For the long-term, the Natural Resources and Energy Agency has started a two-year study of the feasibility of digging or blasting out huge underground rock tanks, either scratch or by utilizing old mines.

An expert group has already advised the government that the cost per kiloliter would be greater than the price of oil at the mid-1980s.

Two different experiments are under way. The first will be a deep granite rock bed under ground water, with surrounding water pre-working as a seal. The second will have walls reinforced concrete.

Terrifying holocausts involving oil depots have been predicted in the event of a major earthquake and the Tokyo is particularly vulnerable. Rock tanks would be in remote areas but it is difficult to admit that they do not last at this stage if the tanks are earthquake-proof. (O)

A wary Morocco

By Tony Hodges

RABAT—

The Moroccan government would never accept a Polisario "mini-state" in Tiris el-Ghribia, the Mauritanian sector of the former Spanish Sahara, according to a Moroccan minister.

Abdul Salam Zained, the secretary of state in the prime minister's office, said he would favor occupying Tiris el-Ghribia if the new military regime in Mauritania decided to hand it over to the Polisario guerrillas, who are fighting for independence for the former colony, by Mauritania and Morocco in 1976.

"We cannot allow a hostile state to be set up between Morocco and black Africa," Zained maintained that this would not constitute a violation of Mauritania's sovereignty. Citing the advisory opinion on Western Sahara issued by the World Court at The Hague in October, 1975, he claimed that the court had recognized both Moroccan and Mauritanian rights to the Western Sahara.

Carter vs. Congress

By Edward Walsh and Fred Barbash

WASHINGTON—

Two weeks ago in Missouri, President Jimmy Carter delivered a hastily rewritten speech to a farm group saying that inflation will never be curbed unless Congress can break free from the grip of "the special interests."

The next day, Carter's Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland told a group of reporters in Washington that he plans to realign against Democratic congressmen who persist in taking "cheap shots" at the president.

Two days later, Carter became the first president in more than a century to veto a major weapons authorization bill. He told a nationally televised news conference he wished he had vetoed more bills in the past and that he will not hesitate to veto others in the future.

That night, Carter summoned members of the congressional natural gas conference committee to the White House for what apparently was an old fashioned session of arm twisting and trading aimed at salvaging the natural gas section of the administration's energy program.

These four seemingly unconnected developments form part of a pattern that has begun to emerge from Jimmy Carter's beleaguered White House in recent weeks. Carter and his aides are embarked on a still cautious but deliberate effort to revive Carter's congressional re-election image, presenting a more assertive president who, in the words of one aide, is telling Congress "to put up or shut up."

No one in the White House is prepared to say that Carter, so successful in 1976 as the Washington "outsider," is about to repeat history and campaign in effect against a Congress controlled by his own party. There is not even agreement among White House aides on the extent to which Carter should or will become more openly critical of Congress.

It is clear from interviews with White House officials that with time running out on the 95th Congress, with many of his key bills still bogged down and with the level of personal sniping at him by members of his own party increasing, Carter has decided he must act to counter his image as a "weak" chief executive who is being pursued around by Congress.

"There is a consensus here that we have no choice at this point," one senior presidential adviser said. "We cannot allow a situation to continue in which people are free to blame the president for their own shortcomings."

According to the White House view, it is Congress, much more than Carter, which should shoulder the blame for the legislative failures of the past 19 months. Much of what Carter promised in his campaign remains stalled in Congress—the list includes the energy legislation, welfare "reform," overhauling the civil service system, enacting tax cuts and revising the tax code.

It is also clear to those around Carter that Congress is not being blamed. Carter's slide in popularity is directly related to the perception of him as ineffective. It is an image that is feeding on itself.

What is particularly aggravating to Carter's aides is what they consider the rising tide of "personal sniping" at the president by congressional Democrats. "I think he's going to a stridently attacking Congress and accusing them of being 'do-nothing' Congress because that might be counterproductive," one aide said. "It might dig in. But he does want to get across the idea that cumulative effect is to obtain."

Carter's speech to the continental Farmers' Association in Columbia, Missouri, have been a preview of this approach. In it, Carter did attack Congress directly. In fact, he charged that "special interests" are blocking his legislative proposals and feeding inflation. (WP)

A time when the whole Muslim society comes together as one

By Jacqueline Underwood Elmaleh

JEDDAH—Daybreak.

The call to prayer heralds a new day and people all over the Islamic world begin to fast.

It is the holy month of Ramadan, the ninth month of the Islamic year, the month in which the Holy Koran was revealed to Prophet Muhammad. For Muslims, it is a season of brotherhood and love, imbued with spiritual tradition.

Fasting is as old as history itself. It was prescribed by God for the people before Islam, and it has been prescribed by Him for the Muslims. Literally defined, fasting or "siyam" means to abstain completely from foods, drinks, intimate contact and smoking, from dawn till sunset, during the entire month of Ramadan. But if one restricts the meaning of Islamic fasting to this literal sense, it would be a sad mistake.

There is a deeper spiritual meaning to Islamic fasting. It teaches man the principle of sincere love (to love God is to know love), gives him hope (for God's grace) and brings him closer to God, since he fasts for God's sake. It cultivates a sound conscience, for the Muslim fasts in public as well as in private. Fasting is also an effective lesson in moderation, will-power and adaptability. It is physically beneficial not only as a form of discipline, but it relieves the stomach and relaxes the digestive system as well.

In the social and humanitarian sense, fasting brings man the rewards of patience and unselfishness. The experience of the pains of deprivation make him realize the effects of such pains on others who may be deprived of essential commodities.

Jeddah: A great world bazaar

By Jim Landers

JEDDAH—Sunset.

An azur sky starts receding before a robe of darkness. A cannon booms. From hundreds of minarets, the call cry of the muaddin rises in a city bathed in stillness.

After prayer, Ibrahim prepares to break fast. With solemn ceremony, he arranges his cups and bowls, his dates and grapes, his thermos of water from the Holy well of Zamzam in Mecca. He normally breaks fast alone this year, but in a season of charity and hospitality, Ibrahim is one of many Muslims who allow for the possible unexpected guest.

"Ahh wa sahlan!" Ibrahim says, gesturing to the bowls and cups spread in the courtyard. We crouch together before the plates, salute the mercy of God, and drink. This is followed by dates, and green grapes from Taif, other simple fare of a delicacy and humility entirely appropriate to the occasion.

Ibrahim hails from Taiz, in Yemen, and in this year's Ramadan, he breaks his fast without his family.

But all across the city, families have gathered to break fast together and to celebrate the first meal of the new day. The streets are not as deserted as they once were; the hum of air conditioners is a reminder that the hardships of fast are not as difficult for many as they once were; but in this one, quiescent hour of twilight a peaceful piety reigns supreme over the commercial energies of Jeddah.

Eleven o'clock.

There is something about a merchant that loves holidays, that loves the crush and sweater of hundreds and thousands of light-hearted people. Shutters are open, sidewalk stalls appear, pajamaed men with clanking bells sing over their shoulders begin jostling for favored street corners. In no time, one of the world's great bazaars has flowered in the streets, sidewalks and alleys below Jeddah's skyscrapers.

For the merchants of Jeddah's souk, Ramadan is a dizzying season. From the moneychangers on Shara Gabel to the tinware salesmen of Bah Mecca and Bah Sharif, there are smiles and brisk palms. Some might volunteer that this happy anticipation stems solely from a long experience with light-hearted shoppers who also make light with their money.

"Not so," insists Suleiman, a moneychanger on Shara Gabel. "This is the night season. People are more friendly because they have now broken fast. It's—a coffee boy brings tea and a wad of telexes from New York, Tokyo, London, Zurich—'Humm. Yes. It's a time of happiness for all of us, because we reaffirm our faith during Ramadan."

Another interruption. A delivery boy hands Suleiman two crisp stacks of $100 bills. Suleiman checks the lat quotations from Zurich and passes the money on to an associate, with instructions on the selling price.

The gold souk is jammed, bursting with people from at least 12 different countries. People enter shops here the way they would board a crowded bus—with shawwafed hands, a shuffling dance of jostle and shove. The rhythm is patterned, for there is a sense of masculine hesitation when a phalanx of women appears, the husband wincing slightly, and begins calling for this bracelet or that necklace, the shop clerks rolling their eyes as children pound on the glass counters.

Ramadan is a time of families, and the shopping entourage in the souk appears to include entire groups.

In the alleys of the Turkish Quarter the familiar aroma of cardamom and shisha licks the meditative wistfulness of a summer's night. In this month, pipes must be protected from soccer balls, and it is a solitary man who can spend his evening uninterrupted by the scurrying and laughter of children.

Two-thirty a.m. The cannon booms again.

Everywhere in the souk people continue to mill about the shops, although many of the weary youngest are now asleep on their father's shoulders or mother's arms.

It is time to go home, to enjoy together the last meal of the night, to talk with brothers, fathers, friends and relatives in the warmth that any mother knows will spread through a house filled with family.

The carnival atmosphere of the souk continues, but many shops are now shuttered once more, their owners off to the comforts of home.

Families draw together to for days or weeks or even months. He thus learns sympathy for his fellow man.

During the month of Ramadan, there is always a host of charitable acts. A popular practice is slaughtering a goat and distributing the meat among the needy; others will prepare a meal for the poor. Another highly regarded act is to help Muslims in debt, and large sums are donated to bail people out of debtors' prison. Some Muslims bring water from the holy well of Zamzam in the Haram al-Sharif in Mecca, and distribute it in the street just before sundown.

Apart from fasting and charitable acts, the sayings of Prophet Muhammad advise exerting the utmost patience and humbleness in all daily affairs. During the holy month people must be cautious in using the senses, the mind and, especially, the tongue; to abstain from careless and gossipy chat and to avoid all suspicious motions.

The break fast or "Iftar" begins when the last glow of the sun sinks below the horizon. In Saudi Arabia, the guardian of the faith, many Muslims follow the tradition of the Prophet. Iftar consists of three dates and a glass of water. It is usually followed by coffee, the sunset prayer and a light meal.

Ramadan meals, which are often family gatherings, are filled with a variety of special delicacies; meats, sweets and different drinks. The appetite is appeased with such dishes as "sambusik," small triangles of ground meat, herbs and spices wrapped in thin pastry and deep fried. To quench the thirst, there is "iqqas," made from licorice root and "tamerhindi" produced from the tropical tamarind fruit. A favorite desert is "kalfi," half-moon shaped pastries stuffed with either unsalted cheese or walnuts and dipped in liquid sugar.

Following the ritual of breaking fast, Ramadan evenings are embodied with extra devotion and social liveliness. After the evening prayer (between nine and ten) there is an added prayer during this holy month, known as "taraweeh." It extends the usual five minutes of worship to over twenty minutes. This practice of faith is sometimes complimented with study and recitation of the Holy Koran.

As the night rolls in, the streets of the city come alive with activity. Everywhere people are visiting and in Saudi Arabia there is a tradition where the young in the family meet with the elders. It is a time of rejoicing and renewing friendships.

Just before the break of dawn, about three o'clock in the morning, the Muslims have their second meal called "sahur." In the thoroughfares of the town, a man walks beating a huge drum to wake all who have fallen asleep. After sahur, a tradition recommended by the Prophet, people often remain awake until dawn, spending their time in prayer, reciting the Holy Koran or family socializing.

The peak of Ramadan is "Lailat al-Qadr," celebrated between the 26th and the 27th. It is the night in which, according to Sura 97, the Holy Koran was first revealed to Prophet Muhammad. It is a night of spiritual exultation and a minor pilgrimage or "umrah" is made on the occasion. Known as "the night that is better than a thousand days," it is said that as much as 80 per cent of the population of Jeddah makes the trip to Mecca, while others come from all over the world (some hooking two months in advance.) On this hallowed eve, congregational prayer is intensified and "the doors of heaven are opened" as the many believers share a spiritual communion with God.

With the close of Al-Qadr night, there are three days left until the end of Ramadan and the beginning of the feast known as "Eid al-Fitr." During this time, it is the duty of every Muslim to pay "zakat," which along with fasting and prayer is one of the Five Pillars of Islam. The technical meaning of the word applies to the distribution, to the needy, of a minimum of 2½ per cent of what a Muslim with means possesses. It is preferable to give in food and before the breaking of fast, so that the poor, too, can enjoy the celebration of the Eid.

On the completion of the fast of Ramadan there is also a special duty called "sadaqat al-fitr" or charity of fast-breaking, that is distributed again to the rightful beneficiaries.

Ramadan, more than any other time in the Islamic year, originates in the spirit of social belonging, of unity, of brotherhood and of equality before God. The whole Muslim society, in observing the same duties in the same manner at the same time for the same motives to the same end, becomes one. This is the spirit of Ramadan.

RAMADAN

"So whoever of you is then at home, let him fast this month."

read from the Holy Koran.

Heap praise on the success of a friend or the beauty of a new child.

In the home, the quiescent hour has returned.

Shawarmas and roast chicken are selling fast, but there is nothing unusual in that.

In fact, in the commercial section of Damman, there is little — except the post-midnight hour that finds the shops still open — to indicate that this month is different.

Business as usual in Al-Khobar and Damman underscores two facts of life about Ramadan here: It is a time when many leave the country, and those who stay do their celebrating at home.

A good barometer of how quiet things are comes from shop keepers in Al-Khobar, who say there seem to be fewer people around even than last year.

Yet there is one establishment there which appears as busy as ever.

There are white coconut rolls filled with filberts, a wheat dough cookie (called Mamoul) soaked in butter and shaped in a wooden spoon with a design in its fold, and a favorite called Faisaliyya, which Aboud says is the most difficult to make.

These are triangular envelopes filled with whole pistachios. The dough involved must be thinned to the most delicate strength before shaping — hundreds of fillets to each piece. The baker must move fast, because the dough dries out in about 10 minutes.

At 4 a.m., Muhammad Tawfiq Aboud and his staff begin the baking, rolling, cutting, folding and decorating that will fill the pastry cases of their shop on Prince Muhammad Street with round trays full of year-round favorites and Ramadan specialties.

Aboud's white-tiled establishment is filled these days with both Saudi and foreign shop-

AL-KHOBAR—Traffic clogs the main streets. People jostle between the close-packed wooden stalls that sell shirts and robes, and they bend to inspect hand-woven prayer caps sold by women on the pavement. Shawarmas and roast chicken are selling fast, but there is nothing unusual in that.

For some of the favorite is the old standby, baklava Arah style: thin layers of dough arranged in a shallow buttered pan, and covered with a layer of crushed walnuts or, a real treat, ground pistachios. There is another layer of dough, and the finished product is laced with syrup made of sugar and lemon water or of honey.

Another delicacy which comes in many forms is called kulfawish, which means, "eat and be thankful." The story goes that someone was once asking a baker so many questions about the name of this shape and the name of that ingredient, that the exasperated man answered with the phrase by which the pastry is called today.

Twenty-five years ago, Muhammad Aboud walked into a pastry shop in his native Tripoli and "watched," he says. Since then, he has been making the pastries exactly the same way they were made then. His success comes from practice and consistency, not creativity.

"I can't put my own touch or change ingredients," he said. "People have in mind what they want certain things to taste like during Ramadan, and they don't expect anything different."

From Riyadh, Joyce Prince writes:

The downtown evenings are a gala. Shops usually closed by 9 p.m. don't even open until eight o'clock, and their doors stay open until 1 a.m. or later.

A typical night downtown will find five lanes of traffic jammed onto a three-lane street.

The long wait for the snail-like traffic doesn't seem to upset anyone. The atmosphere is festive.

Many more women are out in the souks than I remember from before Ramadan. The women usually prefer to shop in the mornings, but these nights they come with their husbands and children.

The shops are jammed, with people waiting outside for a chance to slip in. Bakeries are busy selling Ramadan pastries.

"Families stay up all night in conversations and visits," our driver explained. "There are three meals: one just at sundown, another at 10 p.m. and a third around 2:30 a.m."

Times change, as do some of the customs of Ramadan

JEDDAH — As Sandi Arbia has seen vast changes in recent years, so too have its customs in this holy month. In the west of the country, the cities of Taif, Mecca and Jizan each have a personal story.

Hammadi al-Uwaidy, an old-timer of Jeddah, speaks of Ramadan 40 years ago: "It is easy now to fast in our day, everything was very difficult. Now, the young generation have air conditioners at home, in the office and even in cars. In our day, we used to wet towels with water and wrap them around ourselves to cool off."

High in the mountains of the Hejaz lies Taif, a resort city famous for its moderate weather and nearby mineral springs. The summer seat of the government, Taif has undergone immense development in the past decade or two.

When Ramadan falls in the summer season, the tourist population doubles. The city's climate and atmosphere make it an ideal spot to spend the holy month. But because of its popularity and accessibility, hotels are booked long in advance. This year in Taif it is almost impossible to find a parking place and the streets and marketplace are thronged with people.

Only 75 kilometers south of Jeddah, in a long narrow valley, rises the holy city of Mecca. Birthplace of Prophet Muhammad and the heart of Islam, it houses the Haram al-Sharif, enclosing the Holy Kaaba the chief goal of Muslim pilgrimage. Only Muslims are admitted to the sacred city, and during Ramadan the multitudes in Mecca are second only to the time of Hajj. Spirit is high as men and women from all over the Islamic world don the "ihram" the traditional seamless white sheet, and join in worship in the great mosque.

The senior "muaddin," announcer of the hour of prayer, in the great mosque of Mecca is Sheik Abdulla Basnawi, who has been giving the call to prayer for 50 years. In remembering the "old days" the Sheikh recalls: "In the past, people were few and there were no cars or machines. With the advent of highrises buildings, cars and noise, it became impossible for the people to hear the muadzin, so we began to use microphones just 20 years ago." The Sheikh added, "the 'Adhan' (call to prayer) is magnificent, for it connects you to the spirit and reminds you to pray to God."

Jizan, a southern port on the Red Sea and a commercial center between Yemen and Saudi Arabia, has a history that has been associated with the homeland of the Syrian Ghassanids in the late Roman times. The city is famous for its many mosques constructed of white marble and furnished with new reed mats.

In this time of the Muslim year, the souks of Jizan become alive with activity in the afternoon as the people leave work and stock up on Ramadan specialties. The date vendors spread their goods on long tables in the market, where "sambusik" and "al-makhlouba" (fried pastry) are sold. There is also special water in Jizan, for during Ramadan the Jizanees add "fill" (Arabian jasmine) to it.

Opening lead - King of clubs.

There are times when a declarer cannot deviate one iota from perfect play if he is to avoid coming home lame. For example, take this deal where West led a club against four hearts. Declarer had the ace and led the six of hearts to his queen, on which West played the jack.

Now, in order to restrict himself to only one trump loser, South led a low trump to dummy's ten, won by East with the king. East thereupon shifted to the K-A of spades. Declarer declared led the eight of hearts from dummy and finessed after East followed low. But when South then tried to get back to his hand with a diamond to draw East's last trump, East ruffed and returned a club to put the contract down one.

Note that if declarer leads the eight of hearts from dummy at trick two instead of leading the six, he makes the contract. He can later play the six from dummy to dislodge the position and then draw both of East's remaining trumps. Technically, the eight lead—a card exactly equal to the six—is the correct play, but the fact is that very few declarers would make this play.

Americans power to 21 golds

BERLIN, Aug. 28 (AP) — American swimmers, with 21 gold medals and eight world records clinched, stood a good chance of adding to their medal trove Monday, the last day of the World Swimming Championships.

The governing board of the International Swimming Federation turned back a protest that would have reduced by 12 the number of points American Greg Louganis would take into Monday's finals and victory in the men's platform diving.

Several nations, including Canada, protested over a decision by U.S. judge R. Jackson Smith in Sunday's preliminaries to allow Louganis and six other divers to repeat their dives in the ninth round, which was interrupted by a storm.

Louganis' second try on the ninth dive netted him 25 more points than his first attempt, allowing him to finish in second place almost even with East Germany's veteran Olympian Faß Hoffmann.

Monday Louganis outdived Hoffmann by $44.11 points to the East German's $36.75 to clinch the 21st U.S. gold.

America's latest gold medal Sunday went to the Santa Clara, California, Aquanauts, who, performing the music of Shostakovich, won the team synchronized swimming championship with 182.300 points.

Japan took the silver with 181.533 points and Canada the bronze with 177.919.

In water polo, finals, the Americans, seeking to return to the top ranks of the sport, defeated West Germany 6-3 to take fifth place — good enough for a berth in the 1980 Moscow Olympics.

Italy fought Hungary to a 4-4 tie to take the gold.

In qualifying Monday morning for other last day events, Barbara Krause of East Germany set a meet record of 55.99 seconds in the preliminaries of the women's 100-meter freestyle.

American champion David McCagg established himself as the favorite in the men's 100-meter freestyle by clocking at 50.39 seconds.

In the women's 800-meter freestyle, Cynthia Woodhead of the United States, gold medal winner in the 200-meter freestyle, posted the fastest qualifying time in Saturday's preliminaries.

Her time of 8:37.01 led a field of eight qualifiers that included Kim Linehan of the United States, seeking revenge for a disappointing third place show in the 400-meter freestyle, and world record holder Tracy Wickham of Australia.

BERLIN, Aug. 28 (AP) — Soviet swimmer Viktor Kuznetsov was stripped Monday of his bronze medal in the 100-meters backstroke after he failed a doping test, officials at the World Swimming Championships announced.

The International Swimming Federation awarded the bronze medal in the event, which was held last Tuesday, to Romulo Rantes of Brazil, who was placed fourth.

The test on Kuznetsov revealed traces of steroids, which are detectable three or four days after they are taken. Athletes use steroids to improve muscle tone.

Kuznetsov finished sixth in the 200-meters backstroke. His was the first doping case to surface during the ten-day championships, which ended Monday night.

Cosmos land Soccer Bowl as Tueart shows real form

EAST RUTHERFORD, New Jersey Aug. 28 (UPI) — The New York Cosmos defeated the Tampa Bay Rowdies 3-1 Sunday on two goals by Dennis Tueart and another by Giorgio Chinaglia to become the first NASL team to win the Soccer Bowl in consecutive years.

Before a strong partisan home crowd of 74,901 — the second largest to ever watch a soccer game in North America — the Cosmos won their third North American Soccer League title. The previous crowns came in 1972 and 1977.

The Rowdies, who won the league championship in 1975, were dealt a critical blow before the game even started. Rooney Marsh, the club's captain and leading scorer, was out of the lineup because of an infected calf.

The 33-year-old forward was injured in Wednesday's American Conference game when he was spiked by Fort Lauderdale's Maurice White. The leg swelled and shortly before game time it was announced that he was not listed as a starter or substitute.

After a cautious and somewhat sluggish start, the Cosmos drew first blood at 30:42.

Tueart, playing his finest soccer of the season, received a long left-footed pass from Steve Hunt. Tueart took the ball and dribbled it past Tampa Bay goalkeeper Winston Dubois.

The goal came on the sixth shot of the half for the Cosmos and was the fifth of the playoffs for the 28-year-old Englishman, who says the fans are first getting a chance to see the "real Dennis Tueart."

As has often been the case this season, the first goal was the big one for New York. With the opposition losing its defensive poise, the Cosmos didn't waste much time in striking again. In the 44th minute, Chinaglia made it 2-0.

After a long left-footed shot by Hunt, Dubois left the net to make a lunging stop. But Chinaglia who set a league record this year with 34 goals — headed the ball in.

Chinaglia recorded his fifth goal of the playoffs just two days after being sworn in as a U.S. citizen.

The Rowdies scored in the 73rd minute when substitute Mirandinha sent a shot by New York goalkeeper Jack Brand, just inside the right post.

Again, in the 44th minute, Chinaglia made it 2-0.

To close controversial European visit

Chairman Hua holds final talks with Tito

PULA, Yugoslavia Aug. 28 (AP) — Chinese leader Hua Kuo-teng Monday held his last round of talks with Yugoslav President Tito, effectively bringing to an end his nine-day tour of Europe much criticized by the Kremlin.

Tito's press officer on Brioni island, his secluded retreat a one-mile sea stretch from here where the two men have been in conference over the past three days, said the talks again centered on relations and international developments.

Suspected Baader-Meinhof man nabbed

KARLSRUHE, Aug. 28 (AP) — West German police have arrested a convicted mail robber under the suspicion he joined Baader-Meinhof terrorists while serving his prison sentence, sources in Karlsruhe, site of the Federal Prosecutor's Office, said Monday.

The sources, declining to be named, said 20-year-old Peter Becker was taken into custody in Kaiserslautern over the weekend by police who found in his possession maps showing U.S. military installations and plans for robbing a bank in nearby Pirmasens.

Other items police said they confiscated at Becker's house after his release from prison included materials likely to be used for the construction of explosive charges.

They also said they found evidence that Becker had conspired with Klaus Juenschke and Manfred Grashof, both convicted in a Kaiserslautern trial last June of being Baader-Meinhof gang members and sentenced to serving life prison terms for a bank robbery and the slaying of a policeman.

Kaiserslautern police declined any information on Becker, who has not previously appeared on a published wanted list, and the local prosecutor ordered a news ban on the case.

On Sunday evening Tito and Hua had taken time off for relaxation and amusement. This included a joint drive of specially designed three-wheeler, four-seater vehicles used on the island. The two men, in casual outfit, both had their hands on the steering wheel and rode with their respective interpreters crammed in the back seats.

Hua had a car and walking tour of shipyards in Pula after being brought over from Brioni by Tito's 40-meter yacht "Podgorica." The vessel was accompanied by two gunboats. Tito remained behind, waiting for Hua's return for their last talks.

Shipyard workers in greased, blue outfit hailed Hua as he strode in their midst. The shipyards employ 7,000 persons or one-tenth of the population of Pula, an industrial-tourist center on the northern Adriatic coast.

The Yugoslavs have already delivered 15 cargo vessels to the Chinese, of 5-6,000 tons each.

In ceremonial speeches which always follow such visits, Hua again lavished praise on the Yugoslav workers and their achievements, and again had a workers' badge pinned to his Mao jacket.

The foreign press has been kept distant from Brioni island, where Chinese and Yugoslav reporters were summoned and briefed on the talks. After the briefing, Tanjug, the official Yugoslav news agency, said the talks among others centered largely on the course of the nonaligned movement, on current trouble spots in the world — particularly Africa, Asia and the Middle East — and on the course of the world Communist movement.

Korchnoi postpones 18th game; leaves for holiday in Manila

Aug. 28 (R) —

World chess challenger Viktor Korchnoi left Monday night for a brief holiday in Manila, postponing Tuesday's scheduled game with Anatoly Karpov in their championship series.

Korchnoi trails the Soviet champion by four-to-one in the series, with six victories required for the title.

The challenger, 47, was obviously seeking to boost his shattered morale after a number of stunning defeats by the 27-year-old title-holder.

Korchnoi used his right to postpone the 18th clash and left by car on the four-hour drive to Manila with Mrs. Petra Leeuwerik, his delegation chief and a constant companion since his defection from the Soviet Union in 1976.

Korchnoi, expected back on Wednesday for the game now scheduled for Thursday, left this quiet mountain resort after naming British grandmaster Raymond Keene as his new delegation master.

Keene's job was to ease the troubled atmosphere produced by six grueling weeks of battle on and off the chessboard.

Keene declared that his leader had become hopelessly sidetracked by events which had nothing to do with chess.

The Briton, Korchnoi's chief second until now, also said: "While Viktor is in Manila I plan to introduce an atmosphere of detente. I hope I can get Viktor on the right track again by Thursday."

He was within grasp of final victory after his latest win on Saturday night.

review of an Egyptian working paper they plan to submit to the tripartite summit.

Kamel is expected to meet with Sadat Tuesday to discuss the document and work out a general line of approach at the talks.

According to reports from Washington the Camp David talks are expected to start with bilateral meetings between Carter and each of the Egyptian and Israeli leaders. It was not immediately known whether this would be postponed to Sept. 6th or whether Carter would start by meeting Begin first and Sadat later that evening.

The duration of Sadat's stay in Washington depends on the summit talks. This has been left open. Egyptian presidency

Closed shops signal Nicaraguan strike

MANAGUA, Aug. 28 (AP) —

Stores in Managua closed Monday in response to a call for a general strike aimed at unseating the Somoza dynasty, which has ruled Nicaragua for more than four decades.

Some traders here said they closed after being threatened.

Buses were running, gas stations, banks and government offices were open in the capital city but stores in nearly all shopping centers and larger markets were closed.

A few small food stores were open, but their stocks had been nearly sold out in anticipation of the strike.

Some employees huddled around radios in the deserted mall at Centro America, the country's largest shopping center, seeking news of the strike.

Little was available. Most radio news programs had joined the strike, called Thursday by the Broad Opposition Front, a group formed to bring down President Anastasio Somoza.

Heavy gunfire was reported in Matagalpa, 170 kilometers north of Managua. A man who answered the bell at the central mortuary here said two bodies had been flown in from Matagalpa, but declined to say more.

A Somoza-owned newspaper showed pictures of three mangled bodies on the front page.

3 police killed in Spain

MADRID, Aug. 28 (AP) — Three policemen were killed in three separate but simultaneous attacks in Spain Monday.

Two unidentified gunmen opened fire on a Civil Guard on duty at Abastos Square in Santiago de Compostella, a northwestern town. The victim was identified as Manuel Vazquez Chamorro, 41, married and father of four children.

The attackers escaped in a waiting car.

In the second incident, Civil Guard Sergeant Aurelio Salgueiro Lopez, 46, married and father of seven children, received several fatal bullet wounds from the guns of two unidentified men at Mondragon, a Basque town of the northern Gipuzcoa Province.

And in Barcelona, a trio of armed men opened fire on a parked police jeep in the downtown area killing Luis Antonio Rodriguez Garcia, 23, married and father of a child.

No group has yet claimed responsibility for the murders.

A terrorist group which calls itself "Liga Armada Gallega" (Galician Armed League) was blamed for an attack on two policemen who were not wounded seriously in Vigo, a northwestern town, last week.

There were widespread reports of discontent with Somoza's decision to give in to terrorist demands in exchange for the lives of the hostages.

Sandinistas meanwhile circulated leaflets instructing ho holds to stock up on food medicine, and to leave doors open to anyone seeking refuge from the National Guard.

Unrest boiled over after a two-day siege that began Tuesday at the National Palace which more than 1,500 persons were taken hostage by Sandinista guerrillas.
